MAN WHO BUILT BIG LOOKOUT TOWER IN ALBUQUERQUE

C. H. Kissam, Deputy Supervisor Constructed Remarkable Watch Platform to Aid in Detecting Forest Fires.

On his way from the Sitgreaves national forest in Arizona, where last summer he built a 100-foot lookout tower for use in detecting forest fires, to the Carson national forest in the northern part of this state, C. H. Kissam, deputy forest supervisor, stopped at the forest service headquarters today.
He continued on his journey to Carson forest this afternoon.

The building of the fire lookout in the Sitgreaves forest is regarded as a noteworthy piece of work in the service, on account of the difficulties surrounding the construction. Sitgreaves forest is the second forest encountered in Arizona by tourists traveling westward on the ocean-to-ocean highway.

The tower built by Mr. Kissam overlooks an immense area of timber land. Looking eastward from the tower the eye sees a stretch of timber forty miles in extent. It is proposed to sell $39,000,000 feet of the timber that the tower overlooks. An article in Engineering News describes the construction of the watch tower in the forest, referring to it as a remarkable piece of engineering work.
